ORDER AND OPINION

The parties submitted a joint motion for a protective order on October 31, 2005, requesting that this Court issue a protective order covering various information in the underlying litigation. For the following reasons, this Court DENIES WITHOUT PREJUDICE parties' motion [Doc. No. 14]. The parties may resubmit a proposed protective order which comports with Seventh Circuit precedent for this Court's consideration.

I. APPLICABLE STANDARDS

When granting a proposed protective order, this Court must independently determine whether "good cause" exists to seal the requested information from the public record. Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(c); Citizens First National Bank of Princeton v. Cincinnati Insurance Co., 178 F.3d 943, 944 (7th Cir.1999). In doing so, this Court must not grant parties carte blanche to seal or protect whatever they desire. Citizens, 178 F.3d at 944; See also Pierson v. Indianapolis Power & Light Co., 205 F.R.D. 646, 647 (S.D. Ind. 2002) ("Independent and careful evaluations of protective orders are especially important because '[t]he judge is the primary representative of the public interest in the judicial process....'" (quoting Citizens, 178 F.3d at 945)). In other words, this Court cannot serve as a rubber stamp whenever parties wish to seal public records, but must review all requests to seal documents in light of the public interest in the judicial process. Citizens, 178 F.3d at 945 (citing In re Krynicki, 983 F.2d 74 (7th Cir.1992); Miller, Arthur M., Confidentiality, Protective Orders, and Public Access to the Courts, 105 Harv. L.Rev. 427, 492 (1991)).

When reviewing an agreed protective order seeking to seal documents produced in discovery, this Court must ensure that “(1) the information sought to be protected falls within a legitimate category of confidential information, (2) the information or category sought to be protected is properly described or demarcated, (3) the parties know the defining elements of the applicable category of confidentiality and will act in good faith in deciding which information qualifies thereunder, and (4) the protective order explicitly allows any party and any interested member of the public to challenge the sealing of particular documents.” Pierson, 205 F.R.D. at 647 (citing Citizens, 178 F.3d at 946). This Court may issue a protective order in this case pursuant to its referral order and 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A).

II. ANALYSIS

The parties’ proposed order fails to satisfy the fourth prong of the above standard because it fails to explicitly allow any party and any interested member of the public to challenge the sealing of particular documents filed with the court. “The right to intervene to challenge a closure order is rooted in the public's well-established right of access to public proceedings.” Jessup v. Luther, 227 F.3d 993, 997 (7th Cir. 2000). In granting protective orders, judges are thus “the primary representative[s] of the public interest in the judicial process” and must require that a “protective order explicitly allows any party and any interested member of the public to challenge the sealing of particular documents.” Pierson, 205 F.R.D. at 647 (citing Citizens, 178 F.3d at 945-46). In paragraph five, parties state that documents provided to the court must be filed under seal. However, the parties fail to mention that parties or interested members of the public may challenge the sealing of the documents. Therefore, the parties' proposed protective order does not comply with Seventh Circuit precedent.

III. CONCLUSION

Because the parties' proposed protective order does not comply with Seventh Circuit precedent, this Court DENIES WITHOUT PREJUDICE parties' joint motion for a protective order [Doc. No. 14]. The parties may resubmit their proposed order in light of the standards set forth in this order and the citations herein.

SO ORDERED.
